Thanks for visiting our website. Before you go, a few points do need to be made.

First, the purpose of this website is to provide some general introductory information about what we do, our qualifications and our experience. This website is not intended to offer legal advice or legal opinions on specific facts or circumstances. Visitors should not take any action or refrain from taking any action based solely on the information contained on this website without some independent thought, investigation and/or legal representation.

Second, nothing on this website should be understood to constitute an offer to perform any particular services for you. While your inquiries are invited and encouraged – and appreciated – your contacting us through this web site does not, by itself, create an attorney-client relationship nor does it contractually obligate CREIGHTON & ROSE, P.C., to represent you, regardless of the content of such communication.

Third, and in the same vein, please do not send us any unrequested confidential information prior to our formal acceptance of your case.

Fourth, we like to think that we do very good work and, over the years, we have obtained some very favorable results for a large number of our clients. The truth of the matter, though, is that the results of any cases that might be described here are provided only as examples. Like so many other things, positive results are content and context dependent, and, even in the best of circumstances, cannot be promised or guaranteed.

Finally, we're only human, and try as we might, we are far from perfect. As a result, the material on this website may contain errors of one sort or another. Consequently, we cannot guarantee its accuracy, completeness or suitability for your purposes.

Thanks again.
